T. R. SAYS HE WILL MAKE BONES RATTLE IN BARNES LIBEL SUIT

New York Politicians Tremble in Their Boots as Trial of Suit Against Colonel for $50,000 Damages Opens

FEAR THREAT HE MADE TO BARE INSIDE SECRETS

Hot Legal Fight in Prospect With Barnes Promising to Make Bull Moose Chief Eat Charge of Corruption

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 19.—National, New York state, Albany county and New York city politicians are shivering now that the $50,000 libel suit of William Barnes against Colonel Roosevelt is on trial here before Justice William S. Andrews, for—

Roosevelt's defense of his attacks on Barnes made in the midst of the red-hot campaign in this state last year, promises to reveal "inside secrets" of the Republican state organization that will blast many political careers.

The opening of the trial drew a great crowd to the court houses here today. After lawyers, talesmen and reporters had been seated less than fifty spectators could be accommodated, so those most anxious to witness the fight appeared early.

Two men satisfactory to attorneys for Mr. Barnes were selected during the opening session of the trial. The Barnes attorneys used up four of their allotted six peremptory challenges before twelve men they decided were satisfactory were in the jury box.

Colonel Roosevelt's lawyers began their examination of the prospective jurors at the afternoon session of court.

Barnes has let his set his jaw and is out to make T. R. eat his words.

Roosevelt in his campaign utterances last year declared the Republican and Democratic state organizations were secretly hand in glove. He pictured the "contemptible" of state government as directly due to the dominance in politics of Charles F. Murphy (Tammany chief) and his subbosses and abetted by Mr. Barnes and the subbosses of Mr. Barnes."

Barnes is no longer chairman of the Republican state committee, but is still regarded as Republican leader of the state. Murphy, as head of Tammany Hall is acknowledged to be state Democratic leader.

BARNES DENIES CHARGE.

Barnes, in reply to the colonel's charge that he is "combined" in politics with Tammany, declared the statement was false saying it "lacks dignity, self-respect and is without foundation."

He immediately prepared to sue for $50,000 damages for libel and Roosevelt was served with the papers at his home in Oyster Bay last July.

Barnes sought to have the trial held in Albany county, his place of residence, but failed when Roosevelt moved for a change of venue, alleging that Barnes controlled Albany county, and an "impartial trial" was impossible there. On Roosevelt's appeal Supreme Court Justice Chester at Albany fixed Onondaga county as the place of trial.

It is expected that Roosevelt in fighting the suit will dig deep into Barnes' past and present political operations in Albany and that many of Barnes' aides will be subpenaed.

Roosevelt's answer to the suit shows that of the three defenses there is only one upon which an earnest application can be made for the dismissal of the suit.

CLAIMS IT'S PRIVILEGED.

That one is now in legal procedure for it sets up that the statement upon which Barnes brought his suit was issued during a political campaign when its very worst is and by right ought to be privileged.

Tammany Chief Murphy who was hit by hard by Roosevelt's charges as Barnes was has not taken any other action except to make a general denial of the truth of the statements. He may, however, be summoned to appear as a witness at the trial.

Roosevelt admits the publication of the statement to which Barnes has taken exception but denies there was any malice in it and that the statement is libelous.

Roosevelt and Barnes have long been political enemies. They clashed over the leadership in this state after T. R. came back from Africa in 1910 and at the Republican national convention in Chicago in 1912. He attacked Barnes and his aide saying they stole the nomination for Taft.

Roosevelt's friends declare the colonel got a chance to learn the "inside politics" of this state while he was governor and that he is ready to let the public in on it.

JUDGE HOLDS DECISION AS TO SANITY OF THAW

(By Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, April 19.—Supreme Court Justice Hendrick reserved decision today on the question of counsel for Harry K. Thaw for a jury trial to determine Thaw's sanity. He requested counsel to submit briefs and announced that he would return his decision before Thursday.

That date was fixed for reappearance of counsel before him on the writ of habeas corpus on which the application was based. If his decision favors Thaw's lawyers, a date for trial will be fixed. If trial is denied, Thaw's attorneys are ready to call witnesses in support of their contention for the decision of the court in person, unaided by a jury.

FIGHT ON MAYOR'S VETO COMES THIS AFTERNOON

The Second ward delegation in council Monday afternoon will lead a fight to override the mayor's veto of the resolution ordering the purchase of brick for the South Pryor street pavement.

Members of the delegation say that they are confident that the veto will be overridden, while friends of Mayor Woodward express equal confidence in their ability to muster enough votes to sustain the executive veto.

W. J. SPEER, state treasurer and bank examiner of Georgia, points to rise in cotton, gain in bank deposits, good business by traveling salesmen, activity in bond market and easy money as signs of returned prosperity.

Great Improvement Seen in Business By Hon. W. J. Speer

State Treasurer Declares Demoralization Caused by War Is Past and Bank Deposits Show $10,000,000 Increase

W. J. Speer, state treasurer and state bank examiner of Georgia, is in close touch with general business and financial conditions over the state. Probably no man in the state is in a better position than Mr. Speer, by reason of his office, to gauge conditions. Mr. Speer sees signs of normal business and prosperity on every hand. He has prepared for The Journal the following statement:

"Figures compiled by this office on the condition of the 695 banks operating under laws of this state, as shown by their recent statement compared with their condition at the close of last year, show a marked and very gratifying improvement.

"The demoralization incident to the war, with its depressing influence on all lines of business, especially the cotton market, has entirely passed away and normal business conditions again prevail throughout the country. The gradual and steady advance in the price of cotton has been a great stimulant to every industry in this state. On this account the banks have increased their deposits $10,000,000 in the last sixty days.

"Commercial travelers, practically idle up to January 1, are all on the road again and are sending in orders which indicate that a general buying movement has set in. The cotton mills are running on full time. The bond market has become very active. The demand for state and municipal securities is very good.

"The recent splendid sale of Georgia bonds upon a basis of nearly 4 per cent interest to Asa G. Candler, whose business sense and judgment are everywhere recognized, has been a great encouragement and a more hopeful financial sign of easy money at low rates of interest for legitimate purposes.

"A general renewal of normal conditions with bright prospects for the future prevails throughout the state."

HOPE OF CONQUERING FRANCE IS REPORTED SET ASIDE BY KAISER

German General Staff Has Abandoned Plans for General Offensive on Western Front, Rome Is Informed

ALL EFFORTS NOW BENT TO STEM RUSSIAN TIDE

Austrian Heavy Artillery and Hungarian Cavalry, Now in West, Ordered Back to Eastern Theater of War

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, April 18.—Abandonment by the German general staff of plans for a general offensive in the west is inferred in Rome from information received there. It is said this decision is indicated by official communications to the Italian cabinet, as well as by statements of Germans in official circles, and that hope of penetration further into French territory has been put aside.

A Geneva dispatch gives the impression that the Austrians and Germans have decided to concentrate their energies on the eastern campaign. A war council presided over by Field Marshal von Hindenburg is said to have determined to transfer to Poland the Austrian heavy artillery now before Verdun, and to send back to Cracow, Galicia, the Hungarian cavalry now in the west.

The British have begun another drive at the German line through Belgium. Sharp fighting occurred there yesterday. The official French report today says the British captured 200 yards of trenches. Berlin, however, says the British were ejected from minor positions they had taken and that British attacks near Ypres broke down.

The French again are on the offensive on the eastern end of the line, and claim substantial progress in Alsace.

Turkish success has reached Petrograd that Austrian attempts to regain positions in northern Hungary have been abandoned.

The situation in the east still is in doubt. Confident assertions from Berlin last week that the Russian advance in the Carpathians had been halted are offset by the Petrograd claims that the principal chain of the mountains, considerably south of every section of the front, now is in Russian hands and that 70,000 Austrians have been captured. The Russian defeat material effect in changing the map of Europe" was one of the questions asked Him. And he answered "No."

"Germany will never sue for peace. She will fight this war to the end, and she will win. The first peace move will come from England just as soon as the sentiment of the English people toward the war is changed—probably about the last half of this year. The negotiations will revolve around suitable guarantees assuring Germany that the warring nations will not attack her or interfere belligerently with her shipping."

These were the words of Dr. Meyer Gerhard as he sat in his room at the Ansley hotel talking to a reporter for The Journal Monday morning. On his tuxedo on the right lapel was pinned the Geneva cross, emblem of his mission to America.

Dr. Gerhard is one of the fatherland's highest officials—privy councillor to the colonial ministry, a position which corresponds to the right hand man of America's secretary of state. He is an expert on colonial affairs and it is his duty to inform the minister of them, who is oftentimes ignorant of their details, being a political appointee.

He is in America as an agent for the German cross—the German Red Red Cross—and has been here since last August. At first his travels in this country were confined to Red Cross work, but within the last five or six months he has made various addresses before the Carnegie peace society, the Commercial club of Georgia, and when it is received by the clerk of that court Solicitor Dorsey will sue out another writ of habeas corpus, bringing Frank before the court for the fourth time to have a date of the execution of the sentence fixed.

In cases of a resentence the state law is not as specific, as where an original sentence is pronounced, and therefore—ironbound assurance from England—that she will not be attacked in this way again and that she can be free to her trade.

"When England is ready to grant such terms the war will end. That is hard to say when. As soon as the attitude of the British public toward the war changes and they demand that it cease, England will start peace negotiations. That time has not yet come. Any rumors of peace now are groundless. It will probably be next fall before the war comes to a close."

GERMANY NOT STARVING.

Asked if there are signs of unrest in Germany, if the people were starving—as has been reported—Dr. Gerhard laughed.

"I had a letter from my wife the other day," he said, "saying that prices were lower in Berlin than they are in the United States. No, sir! Germany isn't starving. She gets all the food she wants from the continent—and she has got some from your country. And as for unrest, that is nonsense. The fact that the German people are warring against ours, has united Germany as nothing else could have done. The other day in Berlin a number of Socialists' party that formerly always was against the government—were at a meeting, and what were they doing? Singing "Die Wacht Am Rhein," and cheering for the government."

Dr. Gerhard laughed again when the reporter asked him about Germany's "spy system." The question was occasioned by a recent article by Frederick Palmer, the war correspondent, stating that Germany's spies were in every city in the world.

"Of course we have our secrets," said Dr. Gerhard, "but not nearly as many as England and France, not nearly so many agents and spies and so forth. There could be no comparison. Germany than there are German spies in England. Spies in America? Nonsense!"

Relations Between Rome and Vienna Near Breaking Point

(By Associated Press.)
LONDON, April 19.—Whether the negotiations between Rome and Vienna concerning Italy's demands for territorial concessions have been broken off remains for the moment an official secret, but it appears to be generally agreed that the tension is approaching the breaking point. It is suggested here that the Italian foreign office is awaiting an ultimatum from Vienna on the subject of Italy's military preparations along the frontier as a pretext to denounce the remaining ties barring an outbreak of hostilities.

The alertness with which Italy's every move now is followed in London indicates the high importance attached here to efforts of Italy to keep fighting line. One of the main reasons advanced for this desire to include Italy in the partnership of the allies is that in no other country is it possible to so effectually the door through which supplies are reaching the Teutonic combatants in considerable amount.

Advance Is Claimed for British Troops in Belgium

(By Associated Press.)
PARIS, April 19.—(Via London.)—The French war office report today reads:

"British troops yesterday captured in Belgium, near Zwartalen, 200 yards of German trenches. These they have retained, in spite of several counter attacks.

"We have been successful on both banks of the river Fecht in Alsace and our advance is being pressed forward on the left bank. Today we gained possession of the summit of Burgkorpfeld, to the southwest of Schillecker-hauseen,

DR. MEMMINGER INDORSES STAND OF DEAN ATKINSON

Scores Moral Cowards Who Tremble at Mention of Sunday Picture Shows

Dr. W. W. Memminger, rector of All Saints' Episcopal church, the speaker Sunday night at the Forsyth theater, came out vigorously in support of Dean John R. Atkinson in the dean's recent plea for a "broader, saner, more liberal moral policy" in Atlanta. Dr. Memminger scored "the moral cowards who are afraid that the opening of Sunday afternoon picture shows will lead to something worse."

"What is left for the poor man's amusement on Sunday? The rich, the well-to-do have their automobiles and they enjoy them, and they should. But to the man of moderate means all is closed.

"The only argument advanced against their opening is that perhaps it may lead to an 'open Sunday.' If the churches keep busy at the spring of human life, instilling cleanliness into the lives of men, they won't have to get on the street corners, in the mud holes or in the legislatures to make people good. And you can't legislate a people good, anyway.

"And just here let me say that the Episcopal church is not the exclusive minority which so many in the south believe, but by far the largest English-speaking church. Because it does not denounce dancing and card playing and does not pry into politics and personal affairs, some say it's asleep. This is not true. When dancing becomes licentious, when card playing is turned into gambling, then the church does declare them wrong. We believe in temperance. Many things are not bad in themselves, but it is cowardly to be afraid of them. And the churches and preachers who denounce all pleasure and recreation are moral cowards.

"Dr. Atkinson is trying to build up a greater, better and nobler manhood and womanhood. He is a dreamer, a dreamer for our good. Let us stand solidly back of him."

Dean Atkinson is in New York for a short rest. He will return in time to conduct the service next Sunday night at the Forsyth.

JAPANESE NOT BUILDING NAVAL BASE IN MEXICO

Commander Irwin Reports Nothing Going on but Salvaging Stranded Cruiser

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Any doubt that may have existed in the minds of administration officials as to the purpose of Japanese operations on Turtle bay, lower California, it was believed here today, had been set at rest by the report of Commander Noble Irwin, of the cruiser New Orleans, that there were no indications of any activity except salvage work on the stranded cruiser Asama.

Commander Irwin had been sent to Turtle bay by the navy department to investigate newspaper reports that the Japanese had established a permanent naval base there. Officials all along had expressed disbelief in the reports that Japan had intended permanent occupation.

The Asama has been aground in Turtle bay since December and reports had said that the presence of British warships was being used as a cloak for establishing a permanent base.

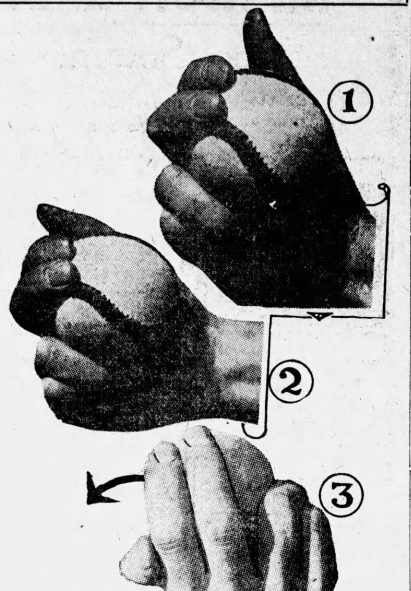
Hints for the Young Pitcher---No. 6

BY HUGH FULLERTON



Although the "out" curve has been used less since the spitter, with its combination of out and drop, came in, it's a handy thing for a young pitcher to have. It is the most natural of all the curves, and the most readily learned. Fig. 1 shows the position of the thumb and first two fingers; the second pair of fingers occupy the position shown in Fig 2, without too much pressure. Fig. 3 indicates how the ball should leave the hand, being literally snapped out of the grasp by a powerful overhand swing of the arm.

MINE WORKERS' OFFICER FACES TRIAL FOR MURDER

(By Associated Press.)

TRINIDAD, Col., April 19.—The work of selecting a jury in the case of John R. Lawson, international board member of the United Mine Workers of America, charged with murder growing out of disorders incident to the Colorado coal miners' strike, was expected to begin in district court here today.

The charge against Lawson is the first against officials of the miners' organization to be called for trial and grew out of the killing of John Nimmon, a guard employed by the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, killed October 25, 1913, during a clash between mine guards and striking miners near Ludlow, Col.

W. E. DENDY IS HEAD OF EIGHTH DISTRICT SCHOOLS

Successful Meet Closes at Washington---Next Convention Goes to Monroe

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

WASHINGTON, Ga., April 19.—The high school meet, which was entered into by a dozen of the cities of the Eighth congressional district, closed its two-days' session here Friday evening with the announcements of the various winners in the literary and athletic contests, with the place for the next meeting and the officers for the ensuing year.

Beginning with the debate Thursday evening, which was entered into by teams from the Greensboro and Eatonton schools, Greensboro won the decision, taking the negative side of the question that "capital punishment should be abolished." During the interval for the judges to make their decision Prof. J. R. Stewart, of Athens, head of the secondary schools of Georgia, made a splendid address upon the needs of the schools of today. In the music contest, also a feature of Thursday evening, Miss Kathleen Stanton, of Social Circle, won the medal.

In the morning session Friday the teachers went into executive session, discussing the problems and needs of the schools. Several papers were read, one of which was an able argument by Prof. Robertson, of Greensboro. In the school auditorium the young men from the cities of the district entertained the audience with several declamations. The medal went to Mr. Malcolm Sims, of Washington.

Friday afternoon was indulged in by the students in athletic contests, Washington wresting the coveted silver cup from Greensboro after one of the most spirited of contests, gaining it by a single point, receiving 27. Athens won third place with a total of 14 points.

At the evening session Friday Miss Mary Paine, of Elberton, won the medal for recitation. Misses Pearl Brown, of Union Point, and Ida Holloway, of Rutlere, tied in the spelling contest. In ready writing, Athens carried off the honors, Miss Virginia Newton winning for the girls and Mr. Edward Soule for the boys. Athens also won the loving cup for the greatest number of points in the literary contest, winning 14. Greensboro was next with a total of 11 1-2, and Social Circle third, with 5 1-2.

The next meeting place will be at Monroe. The following officers were named for the ensuing year: W. E. Dendy, Monroe, president; J. B. Duke, Eatonton, vice president; W. B. Owens, Covington, secretary and treasurer. These gentlemen, with Prof. Burks, of Madison, and Prof. Perryman, of Washington, will be the executive committee.

Between 150 and 200 delegates and visitors were in attendance.

APRIL 22 TO BE TAG DAY FOR SHELTERING ARMS

Society Will Raise Funds for Support of Five Nurseries maintained in Atlanta

To raise funds for the support of five nurseries in Atlanta, the Sheltering Arms society will hold its annual Tag day Thursday, April 22.

Every year, by selling tags to Atlantians, the many women workers of the society raise funds with which the nurseries are operated. Much good is done by these nurseries, which are in charge of competent matrons assisted by young women who volunteer for the work.

Bevies of these young women will cover the city Thursday from West End to Buckhead, and the man who escapes being tagged will do so through hard-heartedness and not because he has been overlooked. The tags can be bought for any sum from one cent up to one million dollars or more, by purchasing a tag, which is pinned upon the coat, the wearer is insured from being asked a second time to contribute to the support of the society.

Mrs. William H. Kiser is president of the Sheltering Arms society, which was founded in 1896 by John Barclay.

FIVE PERSONS GRAZED BY DEATH WHEN AUTO PLUNGES OVER A BANK

Miss Kate Badger, of Lebonon, Tenn., Guest of Miss Sappho Thrash, Is in Hospital With Broken Leg

Two young ladies and three young men had a close call Sunday afternoon when the automobile in which they were riding out Cotlier road threw a front tire on a curve and plunged over a steep embankment.

Miss Kate Badger, of Lebanon, Tenn., who is visiting Miss Sappho Thrash, daughter of Dr. E. C. Thrash, of 58 West Eleventh street, was thrown from the car and her leg was broken. Her injuries were the most serious of all. She is at the Davis-Fischer sanitarium and is getting on nicely, although she will have to stay in bed several weeks.

Miss Sappho Thrash, the other young lady in the car, also was thrown out, but escaped with cuts and bruises which are not serious. She was taken to the Davis-Fischer sanitarium for medical attention and went home Sunday evening.

The young men in the car were Robert Ingram, son of Dr. R. F. Ingram, of 421 Washington street, who was driving the car, which belongs to his father; his cousin, Laurin Ingram, of Greensboro, Ga., and Frank C. Lemtz, a student of the Atlanta Dental college, who rooms at the Y. M. C. A.

Robert Ingram, being at the wheel, was not thrown from the car, but was cut in several places by broken glass from the windshield and was bruised in the abdomen. He was up Monday morning.

Laurin Ingram was thrown out of the car against a telephone pole and was knocked unconscious for a few moments. He came around in time to give assistance to the young ladies, and Monday was little the worse for the accident.

Frank Lemtz, thrown from the car, landed in soft ground and was practically unhurt. He was in school Monday morning.

The car, a new Premier Six, will need a new radiator, a new hood, new fenders and a new windshield, while the top will have to be repaired, but the motor and chassis were not badly damaged.

That the young people escaped with their lives was due to the moderate speed at which Robert Ingram was driving. He was going between twenty-five and thirty miles an hour, and when the tire blew out he threw on the brakes and stopped the car before it turned turtle. He could not, however, hold it entirely to the road, and it swerved to the outside of the curve, climbed the rubble embankment, and fell partly on its side against a telephone pole.

DECATUR CHILDREN CLEAN TOWN OF ALL OLD CANS

Nine Thousand Gathered Up in Recent Clean-Up Campaign

The proverbial canine with the can strapped to his tail would flee in horror from the dumping ground of Decatur, should he chance that way, for there are 16,200 cans there that have been gathered by the school children during the clean up week.

There are cans of every size and height that were picked up by the school children in their competition for the prizes that were offered by the Decatur board of trade. Nine thousand odd cans were gathered by the pupils of the negro schools and Decatur darktown is clean as well.

The Decatur board of trade also offered prizes for pledges secured by boy and girl members of the clean up who agreed to observe clean up week. So profitable was the week set aside that Decatur citizens have decided to change the slogan of clean up into clean and have inaugurated a perpetual cleaning period.

MAJOR GUINN ADDRESSES THE JEWISH ALLIANCE

School Board Head Talks on "True Ideals of Public Education"

An address on "True Ideals of Public Education" was delivered by Major R. J. Guinn, president of the city board of education, to an audience of 500 at Jewish Alliance Sunday evening.

Major Guinn was introduced by Rabbi David Marx as "one of the greatest builders of the real builders of Atlanta—its children."

Major Guinn spoke of education as the most potent line of human endeavor. True education, he said, starts in the home. Every useful occupation should be glorified, every hurtful occupation should be discouraged.

The program was interspersed with vocal solos by Mrs. Jacob Wilensky and Ernest Mundel, accompanied by Mrs. L. Adler and Mrs. Grace Bell. Frank Turner played a violin solo.

FIFTH REGIMENT HEARS DR. R. F. EAKES PREACH

Dr. Robert F. Eakes, chaplain of the Fifth regiment, national guard of Georgia, preached to them Sunday morning at the First Methodist church.

The regiment, several hundred strong, assisted in a body from the armory to the church. They were led by Colonel Cecile H. Hall. Seats had been reserved for them.

Dr. Eakes' subject was "Follow Me," the words of Jesus and part of the sentence "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow Me." He showed Jesus to be the great leader, the ideal leader.

ALMOST CRAZY WITH ITCHING AND BURNING

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 26, 1915.—"My face and body were a solid mass of little sores which itched and burned me so badly that I almost went crazy. They started in the form of little pimples which opened and formed scres. I could not sleep at night and at work if I became overheated it would itch something terrible. I used all kinds of soaps, salves and prescriptions that did me no good. I had this skin trouble for a year or more before I used Resinol. As soon as I started using Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap the itching and burning stopped at once, and in five weeks my face and body were as clear and soft as could be. I used only two jars of Resinol Ointment and three cakes of Resinol Soap.

"A friend of mine had a bad case of skin trouble. His face was broken out so badly he was ashamed to go out on the street. I told him to use Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap and in four weeks he was all well and one could not tell he ever had a pimple or sore on his face." (Signed) August E. Mills, 2306 Elliott avenue. IN STERLING LIVES A GIRL

Who Suffered As Many Girls Do—Tells How She Found Relief.

Sterling, Conn.—"I am a girl of 22 years and I used to faint away every month and was very weak. I was also bothered a lot with female weakness. I read your little book 'Wisdom for Women,' and I saw how others had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it, and it has made me feel like a new girl and I am now relieved of all these troubles. I hope all young girls will get relief as I have. I never felt better in my life."—Mrs. JOHN TETREAULT, Box 116, Sterling, Conn.

Massena, N.Y.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I highly recommend it. If anyone wants to write to me I will gladly tell her about my case. I was certainly in a bad condition as my blood was all turning to water. I had pimples on my face and a bad color, and for five years I had been troubled with suppression. The doctors called it 'Anemia and Exhaustion,' and said I was all run down, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me out all right."—Miss LAVISA MYRES, Box 74, Massena, N.Y.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

TRIBUTES PAID MEMORY OF MR. JUSTICE V. READ

Y. M. C. A. Secretaries Hold Memorial Services in Connection With Funeral

That Mr. Justus V. Read, the Georgia-Florida Young Men's Christian association secretary who died in Atlanta Friday night, gave up his life for his work, was the declaration made at the memorial services held by the Young Men's Christian association secretaries in connection with his funeral Sunday afternoon at the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church.

Eight of the secretaries, who had gathered in Atlanta from all parts of Georgia and Florida to attend the funeral, arose in succession and paid tribute to the memory of the man whom they declared had done more for the progress of the Young Men's Christian association work than any other man in the south's history.

"This hero of the gospel has given up life itself in the faithful performance of his duty," said Walter T. Forbes, secretary of the Young Men's Christian association, of Athens, Ga.

W. A. Waggoner, secretary of the Railroad Young Men's Christian association of Atlanta, dwelt on this also in his talk, and said that by working long hours, burning the midnight oil and then being up early the next day and at work all day, regardless of self, he had worn himself out prematurely.

"Had he spared himself in his work for the cause, he would have been among us for many years," said Mr. Waggoner, "but he worried himself day and night for our sake, and literally gave up his life for his work."

The other secretaries who gave tribute to Mr. Read, testifying to his wonderful executive work and perseverance in the cause, were A. L. Lloyd, general secretary, of Jacksonville; J. M. Graham, of Tampa; Thomas Johnson, of Savannah; B. M. Norvell, of Macon; J. P. Jackson, of Atlanta, and B. G. Alexander, a general secretary of the southern Young Men's Christian association board.

WOODS WHITE PRESIDES.

W. Woods White, who has been in active contact and associated for many years in the state Young Men's Christian association work, presided over the memorial exercises, introducing the secretaries. Rev. A. H. Gordon, pastor of the Ponce de Leon Avenue church, conducted the scriptural service in connection with the funeral.

The active pallbearers were the general secretaries who took part in the services, while the honorary pallbearers were the state committee, composed of M. N. Davies, W. B. Willingham, Lott, Warren, G. P. Walker, T. R. Sawtell, C. D. Badt, A. R. Colcord, W. Woods White, R. S. Wessells, J. P. Jackson and Owen Johnson. after the services, the body of Mr. Read was conveyed to the train, to be taken to Jacksonville, Ill., for interment.

A striking feature of the services was the reading of the following resolutions by Lott Warren, of the state committee, the resolutions having been passed by the committee immediately following Mr. Read's death:

"Whereas, our beloved and trusted leader, Mr. Justus V. Read, for sixteen years the state secretary for the Young Men's Christian association of Georgia and Florida, has suddenly called home in the early morning hours of April 17, 1915, and

"Whereas, the whole south, especially Georgia and Florida, has lost a great and courageous association leader, and

"Whereas, the wonderful development in building construction and increased facilities for making more useful and effective the association as a great Christian agency for reaching the boys and young men of the states of Georgia and Florida for Christ and the church is more vividly due to the splendid, unselfish, wise and capable leadership of Justus V. Read than any other agency, and

"Whereas, the state committee of Georgia and Florida of which he was the responsible, capable and efficient leader desires to express in a slight measure their appreciation of his work during his sixteen years connection with their state work; therefore be it,

"Resolved: That J. V. Read by business training and association experience was wonderfully equipped for the work he undertook when he became our state secretary.

"As general secretary at Bloomington, Ill., building secretary at Minneapolis, Minn., assistant state secretary of the state of Illinois and as state secretary of Tennessee, he had met and solved many of the most serious problems of our work.

"He brought to us from these various fields, a rich and varied experience of mature wisdom.

"FAITHFUL AND LOYAL."

"Be it further resolved, that it is our profound conviction that every moment since he has been working in the states of Georgia and Florida, he has been inspired by an extreme desire to be loyal to the Word of God and Jesus Christ, his personal Savior, and the church as the chief representative of Christ on earth.

"Be it further resolved, that at all times and in all places and under all conditions, he has maintained the integrity of the fundamentals of our faith, notwithstanding the ofttimes evidence of some to be misled by the modern spirit of concession.

"Be it further resolved, that in all of the conflicts of the past ten years in which established tests of membership in the association have been questioned, he has been faithful and loyal to that statement of fealty to the Word, to Jesus Christ, to the Holy Spirit and to the church under which our great movement has achieved its present honorable, useful and influential place among the Christian agencies of the world.

"Be it further resolved, that from his earliest connection with our work, and to the last hour, he was loyal to the church of Jesus Christ, and by all means within his power, sought to impress upon the Young Men's Christian associations with which he dealt, the importance of loyally serving and contributing to the strengthening and upbuilding of the church of Jesus Christ.

"His convictions on these subjects by some may have been considered intolerant, but they were the convictions of a man whose experience had taught him that any variation from the sincere, strong things of the Gospel only produced ultimate weakness, even though temporary advantage might appear to result therefrom.

"Be it further resolved, that we here and now record our respect and admiration for his profound convictions and the courage with which he maintained them, his loyalty to the truth, to Jesus Christ and the church; for his unfailing desire to be helpful to his fellow workers, for his resourcefulness in emergencies; for his sagacity in leadership; for his beautiful and unselfish devotion to the work of our two states which we feel compelled to say, resulted in the serious state of his health which culminated in his death.

"Be it further resolved, that every member of our state executive committee hereby desires to record his sense of great personal bereavement.

"Be it further resolved, that we hereby pledge ourselves to the completion of the great program so ably outlined by our deceased brother, and more than half completed at the time of his death.

"Be it further resolved, that we, in the hour of their great bereavement, do extend to his family our personal and united sympathy; that a copy of these resolutions be placed upon the records of the state committee of Georgia and Florida; that a copy be furnished the family, and also the press and association men, and to each general secretary with the request that he read same before the directors of his association."

DR. J. L. WHITE URGES REFORM IN RECREATION

Says "The Mill" Should Be Closed and That Pool Rooms Are Bad

Preaching on "Recreation vs. Dissipation" at the Baptist Tabernacle Sunday night, Dr. J. L. White declared that the day of the recluse in the pulpit is gone, that the preacher who is not interested in recreation has turned away from the thing nine-tenths of his flock are interested in, and that he should be in sympathetic touch with such subjects and be able discuss them with his people.

He said that recreation carried to excess is dissipation and that the great question is to know how far to go and when to stop. Measured by certain principles he laid down, he said that Atlanta's institutions of recreation were in most instances good.

"It is evident," said, "that certain dancing academies have violated the privileges granted them and become mere dance halls. Their licenses should be forfeited and they should be closed. There are many pool rooms, perhaps no more than in other cities of the same size. Pool rooms are hard places to control and they are always of doubtful character. As far as I have been able to discover, most of our moving picture shows are good. However, there is to my personal knowledge one exception. There is one place in our city which presents, as far as I have been able to discover, nothing that could be called decent. It is the Mill. It should be closed immediately."

Officer Ed Arthur, police censor of theaters, stated Monday after reading Dr. White's criticism of the Mill that he will visit the theater during the day to see whether or not Dr. White's statements are justified.

ROTARY CLUB LUNCHEON TO BE UNUSUAL AFFAIR

"Father and Son" Banquet on April 20 Will Be Featured by Talks on Boys

The regular Rotary club luncheon of Tuesday, April 20, will be held in the chamber of commerce assembly hall and will be along essentially different lines from anything the club has done heretofore.

It is a "Father and Son" banquet. Rotarians who have a boy between the ages of ten and sixteen are expected to bring him to this luncheon. If they have not a son of the requisite age, they are supposed to come alone.

The principal speaker will be E. M. Robinson, who is senior secretary of boys' work of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian association, of New York City. He will be introduced by Rotarian A. A. Jameson, secretary of the boys' work for the local Y. M. C. A. Mr. Robinson is regarded by many as the leading expert on boy life in the United States. He is an interesting speaker and will talk on "The Boys of Atlanta." His idea is the development of a closer and more friendly relationship between fathers and sons.

The Rotarian "Clean-Up" expert, George Fauss, will discuss "Doing Atlanta's Wash."

IMPROVEMENT CLUB IS ORGANIZED AT BOLTON

Citizens of Collins District Hold Enthusiastic Meeting, Naming Officers

On Thursday evening a large number of citizens from all parts of Collins district met at the Masonic lodge hall in Bolton for the purpose of organizing an Improvement club.

A number of enthusiastic speeche were made pointing out the chance for development which exists in the West side of the county. Collins district is the largest in Fulton county; it has more voters and pays taxes on a larger assessment than any other, it was stated. The interest aroused by this meeting promises well for that section in the future. It includes already the thriving villages of Inman Yards, Riverside, Bolton and Rosserville.

The meeting was only tentative in its character, but a permanent organization was perfected by the appointment of an executive committee and the election of officers. The officers and executive committee were directed to draw up by-laws and report back to another meeting which is to be held at Bolton on Thursday evening, April 22 at 7:30 o'clock. On that occasion there will be addresses by Colonel Verlin Moore and J. B. Summerlin on "The Resources and Possibilities of Collins District."

The officers elected for the new organization are: President, Dr. Joel T. Davey; vice president, Colonel Verlin Moore; secretary, W. B. Lloyd; treasurer, W. J. Mauldin; executive committee: S. L. Adams, J. B. Summerlin, R. R. Black, W. W. Warren, J. D. Word, J. H. Dooly, Dr. Paul MacDonald.

AGNES SCOTT GIRLS TO PRESENT IRISH PLAY

Yeats' "Countess Cathleen" to Be Given on Campus Monday Night

Members of the Propylean Literary society of Agnes Scott college, Decatur, will present on the campus Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock, "Countess Cathleen," a touching play of Irish life written by W. B. Yeats.

The action of the play begins with peasants starving in Ireland during a devastating famine. Hundreds of peasants are dying, with no hope of food except when the Countess Cathleen, a most beloved woman, could purchase for them. But she is rich, and promises that her gold would used to relieve their suffering. However, scheming merchants, "representatives of Satan," come to "buy souls" in return for food. The countess protests, saying to the peasants she will soon have food for them. But the epvoys of the Devil steal her gold, and she sells her own soul to furnish food for the people. Her self sacrifice results in the saving of her soul and the souls of all the people.

LABOR MASS MEETING DRAWS LARGE CROWD

George L. Berry and Mrs. Sara Conboy Leading Speakers at Forsyth Mass Meeting

A thousand people attended the second mass meeting of the labor revival, which was held Sunday afternoon at the Forsyth theater. George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' union, and Mrs. Sara A. Conboy, organizer of the American Federation of Labor, were the leading speakers.

An interesting program was rendered by the young people. Fuliam Marquardt recited "The Chosen Few;" Miss Marian Robinson sang, and Miss Mary Belle Dean read dialect stories.

Mr. Berry spoke of the discriminations against labor. It was not labor's intention, he said, to stifle business, but said that often tribute was paid men who accumulated wealth by destroying humanity. He scored employers who were prominent in the church on Sunday and starved their employes the rest of the week.

Mrs. Conboy spoke on mill conditions as they affected the family, and she hoped to see the time when it would no longer be possible for a mother to send her child to a nursery while she went to work in a factory.

A banquet was given to Mr. Berry at the Kimball Sunday night. S. B. Marks was the toastmaster.

FRANK LOSES APPEAL TO HIGHEST COURT; 2 JURISTS DISSENT

and the investigation must take into consideration the entire course of proceedings in the courts of the state, and not merely a single step in these proceedings.

(4.) The obligation resting upon this court, as upon the United States district court, to look through the form and into the very heart and substance of the matter, applies as well to the forms of Frank's petition as it applies to the state proceedings which he attacks.

ALLEGATIONS GROUNDLESS.

The petition contains a narrative of disorder, hostile manifestations, and uproar, which, if it stood alone and were to be taken as true, may be conceded to have been inconsistent with a fair trial and an impartial verdict. But to consider this as standing alone is to take a wholly superficial view; for the narrative is coupled with other statements from which it clearly appears that the same allegations of disorder were submitted first to the trial court, and afterwards to the supreme court of Georgia, as a ground for avoiding the consequences of the trial, and these allegations were considered by these courts successively at times and places and under circumstances, wholly apart from the atmosphere of the trial and free from any suggestion of mob domination or the like; the facts were examined by those courts upon evidence submitted on both sides, and both courts found Frank's allegations to be groundless, except with respect to a few matters of irregularity not harmful to the defendant. This court holds that such a determination of the facts can not in this collateral inquiry be treated as a nullity, but must be taken as setting forth the truth of the matter until some reasonable ground is shown for an inference that the supreme court of Georgia either was wanting in jurisdiction or committed error in the exercise of its jurisdiction; and the mere assertion by the prisoner that the facts of the matter are other than the state courts upon full investigation determined them to be will not be treated as raising an issue respecting the correctness of that determination; especially not where the very evidence upon which the determination was rested is withheld by him who attacks the finding.

ABSENCE FROM COURT.

(5) Respecting the fact that Frank was not present in the court room when the verdict was rendered, his presence having been waived by his counsel but without his knowledge or consent, the Georgia court held that because Frank, shortly after the verdict, was made fully aware of the facts, and he then made a motion for a new trial on over one hundred grounds, not including this as one, and had that motion heard by both the trial court and the supreme court, he could not after this motion had been finally adjudicated against him, move to set aside the verdict as a nullity because of his absence when the verdict was rendered. This court holds that there is nothing in the fourteenth amendment to prevent a state from adopting and enforcing so reasonable a regulation of procedure.

(6) It is settled by repeated decisions of this court that the due process of law clause of the fourteenth amendment has not the effect of imposing upon the states any particular form or mode of procedure, so as to destroy rights of notice and hearing, or opportunity to be heard, before a competent tribunal are not interfered with. The dictum by grand jury is not essential to due process. Trial by jury is not essential to it, either in civil or in criminal cases. The uniform course of decisions has sustained the right of a state to permit one charged with a capital offense to be tried by a jury and not be tried by the court; and in another case has sanctioned a state law permitting the defendant in a capital case to be absent during a part of the trial.

(7) This court holds that the practice established in the criminal courts of Georgia that a defendant may waive his right to be present when the jury renders its verdict, and that such waiver may be given after as well as during the trial, and is to be inferred from the making of a motion for new trial upon other grounds when the facts respecting the rendition of the verdict are within the prisoner's knowledge, is a regulation of criminal procedure that it is within the authority of the state to adopt. Since the state may, without infringing the fourteenth amendment, abolish trial by jury, it may limit the effect to the given to an error respecting one of the incidents of such trial. The presence of the prisoner at the rendition of the verdict is not so essential a part of the hearing that a rule of practice permitting the accused to waive it, and holding him bound by the waiver, amounts to a deprivation of due process of law.

(8) The contention that the decision of the supreme court of Georgia that Frank had waived the point respecting his absence when the verdict was rendered amounted in effect to an ex post facto law because inconsistent with previous decisions of the same court, is overruled by this court because, assuming the inconsistency, the prohibition contained in the constitution of the United States, "No state shall pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts," as its terms indicate, is directed against legislative action only, and does not reach erroneous or inconsistent decisions by courts.

(9) To conclude, Frank's petition shows that having been formally indicted for murder, he was placed on trial before a court of competent jurisdiction, with a jury lawfully constituted, he had a public trial, deliberately conducted, with the benefit of counsel for his defense; he was found guilty and sentenced pursuant to the laws of the state; he has since moved the trial court to grant a new trial, and once to set aside the verdict as a nullity; three times he has been heard upon appeal before the court of last resort of Georgia, and in every instance the adverse action of the trial court has been affirmed.

PUBLIC SENTIMENT.

His allegations of hostile public sentiment and disorder in and about the court room improperly influencing the trial court and the jury against him, have been rejected because found untrue in point of fact upon evidence presumably justifying that finding and which he has not produced in the present proceeding his contention that his lawful rights are infringed because he was not permitted to be present when the jury rendered its verdict has been set aside because it was waived by his failure to raise the objection in due season when fully cognizant of the facts. In all of these proceedings the state, through its courts, has retained jurisdiction over him, has accorded to him the fullest right and opportunity to be heard according to the established modes of procedure, and now holds him in custody to pay the penalty of the crime of which he has been adjudged guilty. In the opinion of this court he is not shown to have been deprived of any right guaranteed to him by the fourteenth amendment or any other provision of the constitution or laws of the United States; on the contrary, he has been convicted and is now held in custody under due process of law within the meaning of the constitution.

DISSENTING OPINION.

In their dissenting opinion Justices Holmes and Hughes were very severe in characterizing the trial of Frank in the state court:

"We lay on one side the question whether the petitioner could or did waive his right to be present at the holding of the jury. That question was apparent in the form of the trial and was raised by the application for a writ of error, and although after the application to the full court we thought that the writ ought to be granted, we never have been impressed by the argument that the presence of the prisoner was required by the constitution of the United States. But habeas corpus cuts through all forms and goes to the very throat of the structure. It comes in from the outside, not in subordination to the proceedings, and although every form may have been preserved opens the inquiry whether they have been more than an empty shell.

"The argument for the appellee in substance is that the trial was in a court of competent jurisdiction, that it retains jurisdiction although, in fact it may be dominated by a mob, and that the rulings of the state court as to the fact of such domination cannot be reviewed. But the argument seems to us inconclusive. Whatever disagreement there may be as to the scope phrase 'due process of law,' there can be no doubt that it embraces the fundamental conception of a fair trial, with opportunity to be heard. Mob law does not become due process of law by securing the assent of a terrorized jury. We are not speaking of mere disorder, or mere irregularities in procedure, but of accounts where the processes of justice are actually subverted. In such a case, the federal court has jurisdiction to issue the writ. The fact that the state court still has its general jurisdiction and is otherwise a competent court does not make it impossible to find that a jury has been subjected to intimidation in a particular case. The loss of jurisdiction is not general but particular, and proceeds from the control of a hostile influence.

LOOK AT FACTS.

"The single question in our minds is whether a petition alleging that the trial took place in the midst of a mob savagely and manifestly intent on a single result is shown on its face unwarranted, by the specifications, which have to be presumed to set forth the strongest indications of the fact at the petitioner's command. This is not a matter for polite presumptions; we must look facts in the face. Any judge who has sat with juries knows that in spite of forms they are extremely likely to be impregnated by the environing atmosphere. And when we find the judgment of the expert on the spot, of the judge whose business it was to preserve not only form, but substance, to have been that if one juryman yielded to the reasonable doubt that he himself later expressed in court as the result of most anxious deliberation, neither prisoner nor counsel would be safe from the rage of the crowd, we think the presumption overwhelming that the jury responded to the passions of the mob; of course, we are speaking only of the case made by the petition, and whether it ought to be heard.

"Upon allegations of this gravity in our opinion it ought to be heard, whatever the decision of the state court may have been, and it did not need to set forth contradictory evidence, or matter of rebuttal, or to explain why the motion for a new trial and to set aside the verdict were overruled by state court. There is no reason to fear an impairment of the authority of the state to punish the guilty. We do not think it impracticable in any part of this country to have trials free from outside control. But to maintain this immunity it may be necessary that the supremacy of the law and of the federal constitution should be vindicated in a case like this. It may be that on a hearing a different complexion would be given to the judge's alleged request and expression of fear. But supposing the alleged facts to be true, we are of opinion that if they were before the supreme court it sanctioned a situation upon which the courts of the United States should act, and if for any reason they were not before the supreme court, it is our duty to act upon them now and to declare lynch law as little valid when practiced by a regularly drawn jury as when administered by one elected by a mob intent on death.

LOU CASTRO MAKES HOMERUN BACK TO FARM AND GOES TO RAISING CHICKENS AND SQUABS

ON THE RIGHT are Lou and Billy, his French bull; on the left Mrs. Castro and Dolly, her Eskimo Spitz; and in between are some of Lou's pigeons.

Former Cracker Star Now Shining in the Hotel League and Thinks Simple Life Has 'Em All Beat

"This is the life," said Lou Castro, watering his tomatoes with one hand, spattering meal with the other and keeping an eye open to see that Billy, the French bull, didn't get into the pigeon loft.

"This is certainly the life," he repeated. "There are my beets," and he sprayed water on some green shoots; "those are my turnips; my parsley is over there, and in the corner," with another jerk of the hose, "are my lettuces. Some garden, Jimmy."

Lou was standing in the back yard of the Hotel Griffin, of which he's manager. Near the vegetable patch were white-washed houses, with pigeons beating their wings against the wire in the hot sunshine, boosters scratching in the soil and a continuous chucking and cooing and cackling. Lou himself wore a pair of overalls and a broad smile. And he really looked as if he "loved the cows and chickens."

Lou has done many things in his life and done them well, but this is positively the first time he has been a farmer. At one time he was star shortstop for the Crackers, and later on he was an undertaker, and always he has been the best of good fellows. Two months ago he left Atlanta for Griffin to manage the hotel. And 'twas then he went to raising chickens and squabs—Plymouth Rocks and Homers, not Peachtree and Whitehalls.

"If you visit Lou in Griffin he will not only take good care of you at the hotel but will almost persuade you to be a farmer yourself. He's all enthusiasm when he shows you the garden patch and the pigeons and chickens he has installed behind the hotel.

"Those," he said, pointing to a pigeon with feathers dragging about its feet, "are Carnos. Look like they've got on long pants, don't they?

"And those white fellows with the soft-boiled eyes are Homers. I've got two of 'em. The others are Frillbats, fancy pigeons you know. They lay so fast they wake me up in the night gathering the eggs. I'm gonna get me an incubator and in two months I'll have squabs all over the place, unless I eat 'em."

The Plymouth Rocks feed out of Lou's hand when he brings the grain in, and one old rooster will trail him around with as much affection as Billy or Dolly, Mrs. Castro's eleven-year-old Eskimo Spitz. They seem to like Lou as much as Lou likes Griffin—which is saying a good deal.

Lou says he is figuring on getting a flock of ducks and a covey of blooded pigs. He has learned how to milk a cow and solved the question of "which is the right side" by milking one on the right side before the eyes of his guests. In short, Lou Castro, baseball player, undertaker, umpire and referee of prize fights, has become a hotel manager who does his own marketing and can talk about alfalfa and the price of cotton with the best of 'em.

And still he is a good fellow; only—if you want to talk to him—he may say, "Wait till I go out to the barn and do the chores."

We Take Our Annual Inventory This Week

Instead of dragging out our annual inventory over two or three weeks in the old-fashioned hardware way, we close each of our stores one day and count and list all our merchandise that day. We think this is easier on us and much better for our customers; as we thereby avoid all the poor service caused by trying to take inventory and remain open for business.

On the day that any one store is closed, all the rest are open; and if therefore you find closed the King Hardware Company store with which you are accustomed to trade, remember that any one of our other stores is open, and ready and willing to serve you.

The Roosevelt-Barnes libel suit will at least have the effect of throwing interesting light on New York politics.

It begins to appear as if we would forget the war, no matter when or how it ends.

With the straw hat it is a case of the lid being both on and off.

One Week From Today.

Just a week from today the curtain will roll back for Atlanta's most interesting season of grand opera. We say "most interesting" because of the courage and confidence which the directors of this wonderfull enterprise have shown, because of the public's generous and assuring response, and because of the unusually brilliant character of the program to be presented.

Seven months ago there were persons who doubted the wisdom of attempting a 1915 season of grand opera in the south. They argued that times were stressful and uncertain and might prove distinctly unfortunate for such a venture. But popular sentiment, and, indeed, the weight of business judgment were just to the contrary. The directors of the Music Festival Association and the management of the Metropolitan company decided to go resolutely forward with their plans. They determined not only that the South should have a week of opera this year, but that it should be, as regards genius and art, a week of unexampled splendor.

Events have amply justified their faith. Last autumn's depression has vanished. Atlanta in common with the South and the country at large is entering upon a full tide of prosperity. The demand for season opera tickets has been remarkable; and the present demand for single tickets leaves no doubt that every performance will be a practical, as well as an artistic success. This is going to be the greatest opera week Atlanta has ever known. Persons who want to be assured of good seats should make reservations without delay.

An investigation seems to prove that Japan isn't looking for an elephant on her hands in the shape of Mexico.

The amount of moisture in May is going to have a vital effect on crops and picnics.

Ever notice what a forward thing cotton is getting to be?

On Wearing White.

Commenting on the suggestion that Americans use white goods as a means of solving the dyestuffs problem, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat aptly observes that white is the emblem of peace, "and we shall make a virtue of necessity by visibly expressing in our habilitments the desire of souls toward the European conflict." Further:

"One hundred million people all attired in white should have a wonderful psychic effect. Dress is more compelling in the spiritual world than we may have realized. Half the influence of religious fraternities lies in their fixed design of garmenture, and the church has recognized this fact from the earliest monastic orders to the Salvation Army."

We may not become wholly angelic through clothing ourselves in white, but certainly we shall escape many a spell of midsummer madness by so doing. If it is impossible to get dyes from Germany or to manufacture them at home, we can easily dispense with colors for a season. That will be far better for everyone concerned than shutting down mills and checking industry.

A Tyrant Custom.

The lower house of the Wisconsin legislature has passed a bill making it a misdemeanor to give or receive a tip. However praiseworthy in purpose the measure may be, it is likely to prove negligible in effect. Servility and avarice and cowardice to tyrant custom do a vast deal of harm, but they cannot be legislated out of human nature. If it were possible by statute to prevent men from losing their tempers, it might be well enough to try a law to that end, but ten thousand years at least must pass, we imagine, before government will be warranted in entering upon such regulations.

In matters of this kind, public sentiment can do more than law. Public sentiment, to be sure, is oftentimes distressingly craven. Millions of men will follow a beaten track year after year, knowing well enough the slavish folly of their course, yet lacking the pluck to break away. Soon or late, however, some bold or eccentric individual will dash out of line; and others follow, slowly at first, but eventually in legions. Thus, if at all, the tipping nuisance will be downed.

Almanac note: Expect gradually warmer weather henceforth.

Summer is known in advance by the railroad and hotel folders.

Preparing for Prosperity.

"Thoughtful and farsighted business men see the coming of prosperity and are preparing for it."

The quotation is from a Journal interview with Mr. Hugh M. Willet, president of the National Association of Life Underwriters and an authority on the South's insurance business. Studying conditions from this standpoint, he reaches the same conclusion as that to which observant bankers, postoffice officials, credit men and cotton brokers have come, namely, that the period of depression is over and that a time of wonderful activity lies just ahead. And he stresses the fact that thoughtful men are making ready to grasp the opportunities which are near.

As regards insurance, Mr. Willet notes that "the demand for policy loans is much less than for several months past," being now practically normal, and that "the volume of new insurance being written by many companies is larger than at this time last year." The latter fact is especially significant. Insurance, it is true, is among the necessities; at least it is so considered by prudent men. But in seasons of great financial strain, the writing of new insurance naturally lags. The fact that more is being written now than a year ago is convincing evidence that general conditions are easier and more hopeful.

With bank clearings normal, postal receipts normal, credit conditions sound, money for legitimate enterprise easily available and cotton quoted at ten cents a pound, the return of prosperity is assured. Seven months ago retrenchment and extreme caution were necessary, but today the skies are clear, the ways of action are open wide, and the chief thought of business should be preparation for the stirring future.

Well, if Colonel Roosevelt and Mr. Barnes don't come to blows in the court room it will be a tame trial.

Let everybody get together now for the great Southeastern Fair.

Sam Dibble.

Th death of Sam Dibble brings a heartache to everyone who knew him, and especially to his comrades in the newspaper field. He was a gifted writer, a discerning critic of literature and of life, a friend always to be trusted, a man who did the day's work to its full and faced sunshine or shadow with a soul serene and strong. As a member of the Constitution's editorial staff, Mr. Dibble impressed himself upon thousands of readers to whom he was personally unknown. The vigor and charm of his style were the natural outcome of the strength and clarity of his thought. In his writing as in his life there was an air of engaging simplicity and directness, with a gleam here and there of quiet humor. He was an honor to his profession. He served his community. And he leaves to friends and kindred the comfort no less than the sorrow of a rarely beautiful memory.

An Inspiring Record.

An acre of sugar cane yielded a net profit of $90.11.

An acre of sweet potatoes yielded a net profit of $49.82.

An acre of truck products yielded a net profit of $39.29.

An acre of corn yielded a net profit of $30.51; an acre of wheat, $17.26; and an acre of peanuts, $11.22.

These figures are from a report of the agricultural department of the Central of Georgia railway and refer to results obtained last year on twenty-nine test farms, comprising eleven hundred and thirty-five acres, which were operated at points along the Central of Georgia lines in this State and Alabama. The crops cultivated included cotton, corn, oats, wheat, peanuts, velvet beans, sweet potatoes, sugar cane, tobacco, peas and truck. Their aggregate value was $35,280, and their net proceeds, after deducting the cost of labor, fertilizers, seed, harvesting and marketing, amounted to $12,502, or an average net profit of more than eleven dollars an acre. On ten farms the average exceeded fourteen dollars an acre; and on some, twenty-five dollars.

For a year of unusually low prices for cotton, this record is truly remarkable, and it is the more interesting because it can be duplicated by any Georgia farmer who follows the methods that were practiced on these farms under the guidance of the Central of Georgia's demonstration agents. Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the State College of Agriculture, well says that this record "indicates in the most emphatic manner the possibilities of our soils when operated under rational systems of management:"

"These figures, so carefully and systematically secured, should stimulate an interest in agriculture and in the conservation of our soils as our most permanent and profitable resource. They demonstrate to the homeseeker the golden opportunity which awaits the wise investor in Georgia lands. in this connection it is important to remember that these results have been obtained in a year of financial stress and when cotton brought the lowest price recorded in more than twenty years. Under normal conditions the profit would have been more than doubled."

The success of these test farms was due largely to their diversity of crops and their production of food supplies. That policy above all others is needed today.

A Japanese official predicts an early end of the war; but as far as Japan was concerned the war has already ended.

In the Wake of the Battle.

BY HERBERT COREY.

SUWALKI, Russia (By Mail.)—A man came down the road toward us, wearing the green-gray uniform of the German soldier. He walked slowly, not as though he was tired, but as though he felt no need to hurry. As we drew nearer we saw that his left hand was in a blood-stained first aid bandage. He had no rifle. The Rittmeister leaned out of the car:

"Where are the Russians?" he asked.

"Up the road," said the man briefly. He walked on.

We were trying for a glimpse at the battle of Augustowo. Now we know that General von Eichern in this battle captured 100,000 prisoners and an untold number of guns. It was this fight which finally smashed Russia's offensive possibilities at that time. Then we only knew that all the night before we had heard the thumping of distant cannon—heavily, as though some one was untiringly pounding a somewhat wet bass drum—and that somewhere ahead of us on the road was a continuous noise of fighting. It was so near that in a shift of the wind the machine guns sounded like the rattling riveters at work on a New York skyscraper. The heavier artillery made a dull background to their distant clamor.

"Good!" said the Rittmeister. "We shall go on."

Under the wheels of the car the road to Grodno was packed with wet snow. The snow was kneedeep in the open pine wood that came up to the highway on either side. It was criss-crossed with tracks, as though a multitude of men had shuffled through it an hour before. There were no paths. We met a light battery returning from the field to take up a new position somewhere on the 150-mile-long front. The men lolled on the gun carriages with the air of tired workmen. They were smoked and black with powder. The horses moved at a prosaic walk. A mounted man approached us slowly, for his horse was very tired. He carried his rifle across his saddle.

"Where are the Russians?" asked the Rittmeister.

"Up the road," said the man.

It had not seemed real to us. We were unable to comprehend that we were nearing the line of battle. The little village of Augustowo, which we had just left, had been filled with soldiers and guns and rumbling wagons. There had been an air of bustling activity. Here there was nothing but the silent woods and the snow through which two armies had passed, and now and then a straggler on the road from Grodno. The car picked up speed. That noise ahead became more distinct. The sound of rifle firing was ceaseless. The men were not firing by volleys but at will.

A saddle path ran on either side of the road. Away ahead we saw two people on the path at the left. As we came nearer we saw that the first was an elderly woman. In her arms she carried a shapeless bundle, awkwardly as women carry blankets from a bed. One felt like laughing at her. As the car passed we saw that tears were running down her cheeks. Now and then she put up one hand clumsily aronud the bundle and tried to dry her eyes. Twenty feet behind her tagged a sullen little girl, carrying a school sack crammed with heavy objects that made it bulge. She was very tired. Her feet slipped on the snow as she struggled to keep up.

Then we met the dead men.

The weeping woman and the sullen little girl had passed them on the by path. I do not now remember how many dead there were. There was one, I know, who was lying on his back. His feet were wide apart. He had been sheltering behind a tree when he was shot. And there was a Russian, with glaring red shoulder straps on his brown uniform. He was lying on his side, but with his two arms extended and quite clear of the ground. They seemed to reach toward us in a mute prayer.

"God!" said Fox.

Some one had pulled off the shoes of a dead Russian who lay in the ditch by the little bridge. One foot was wrapped in a whitish-gray bandage. The other was covered with a woven sock. Those toes were thrust upward stiffly. Farther back in the wood we saw a man lying upon his back, his hands crossed over his breast, as though some comrade had prepared him for burial. His musket leaned against a tree. The Rittmeister spoke and I ceased to count the dead.

"They are firing just ahead," he said.

It was a wet, heavy day. From time to time a drizzle fell upon the snow. We saw no soldiers of either army, but rifle shots became more frequent in the wood on either side of the road. It was precisely like the first day of the deer shooting season in the Adirondacks. The Rittmeister said something to the soldier who sat at the left of the soldier chauffeur. He took the two rifles out of the clips in which they stood upright outside the car at his left hand. The chauffeur leaned one between his knees. I glanced over at the Rittmeister. A long, brown automatic pistol was in his hand.

The drizzle had become almost a fog. Far ahead I could make out a train of transport wagons moving back upon Augustowo at a slow walk. Two soldiers were trudging heavily past us on the by path. Perhaps they were wounded, although no bandages showed. Neither one carried a rifle. They looked up in uninterested fashion as we went past. We began to see graves in the snow. Wherever the eye wandered there was a splash of brown-red earth against the white. The burial squad had covered this ground. One felt that these graves in the snow were shallow. Here and there a cap or a lancer's helmet had been placed upon the grave, for the later identification of the man who lay below. The hunters in the wood were firing more frequently.

There was a large, substantially built house at the left of the road, and perhaps 100 yards ahead. As I glanced at it my eye was caught by some odd bit of color in the open door of an outbuilding. I watched it as the automobile moved on, slowly, almost foot by foot. At last I saw it was the face of an aged woman. She wore a red shawl about her head. Her body was concealed from sight in the outbuilding, and her head was thrust out of the door. Her jaw had dropped so that her open mouth could be seen from the road. She wore an air of tragic horror. She seemed listening—listening—— One of the dead horses by the roadside had had its throat cut. Some one had been merciful. A hussar came leading a tired horse.

"Are the Russians on the road?" asked the Rittmeister.

"Not on the road. In the wood," said he.

There came a hussar on a horse, holding his gun upright on his thigh. He wore a businesslike air, in contrast to the indifferent manner with which the others had eyed us. The Rittmeister repeated his question.

"Not on the road," said the hussar. "In the wood. Just ahead."

Every few feet upon the road there was a huddle of old clothes. Each one had been killed in action. I do not precisely know the reason, but always where a man has been killed scattered garments remain behind. Perhaps the searchers tear them off in looking for his brass death check. There were many—many—of the comical fur caps the Russians wear. I counted a dozen different forms and furs. Then I grew uninterested. The Rittmeister told the chauffeur to turn the car.

"We will go back," said he. "We have seen as much of the battle of Augustowo as it is possible for us to see without taking part in the action. These roads are full of Russian stragglers. I do not wish to have you hurt. I could not explain it."

I said we did not want to get him into trouble. Then Fox and I laughed loudly at the feeble joke. It seemed to help matters somewhat to laugh. The Rittmeister was an entirely charming companion. He had been untiring in his efforts to help us. At this point he feared we had not seen enough.

"I could not take the car further," said he, "because it would not be wise. We could not turn. But if you wish to see the Russians we will go into the wood on foot. Do you wish?"

"No," said Fox.

"No," said I.

As we passed the big house on the return trip I glanced at the door of the outhouse. The old woman was still there, in that attitude of dreadful listening. She had not stirred. We passed the red puddle in the snow where the grenaten had fallen. We came again to the little bridge. In its center—his feet in the roadway, his head lolling down the embankment—lay a great Russian. Blood had trickled from a wound in his head upon the snow. The right side of his face was blackened, as though from powder smoke.

Had he been there when we first passed by? I do not know.

DOGS THAT WORK

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

The postmaster at Yeardon, Pa., is looking for a reliable man to replace the services of two dogs, who, for over ten years, have carried the mail three times a day to and from the railroad station, which is nearly a mile from the post office. The oldest dog died a few weeks ago, and the other one now spends most of his time at his comrade's grave and refuses to notice the mailbag.

* * *

In their years of service these dogs never missed a single trip, or failed to be at the station on time, or to bring the mail promptly to the postoffice. Off duty they were playful, but when the mailbag was in their care they paid no attention to anything else, and any man except the postmaster who attempted to lay hands upon the bag was met with growls fierce enough to deter him. Some of the citizens of Yeardon are now considering the erection of a monument to the dead dog, whose term of service is believed to be the longest upon record, at least in this country.

* * *

Few dogs in the United States have daily work to do, although in Europe the work dog is more frequent than the pet dog, especially among the peasants. A woman in Nantucket has combined both qualities in the Great Dane who is her companion by day and her guardian by night. She operates a small truck garden, supplying fresh vegetables of superior quality to private customers. The dog fills the place of a horse in the cultivation of the single acre which must yield support to them both. He breaks up the soil in the spring by dragging a small plow through it. After the plants are growing, he cultivates them with a cultivator similar to the plow in shape, which he draws carefully through the evenly planted rows. King Olaf has also a wagon which he is harnessed several times a week for the purpose of delivering orders. He has a regular list of customers to whom he takes vegetables without his mistress accompanying him. A small leather bag, attached to his collar, carries the money paid by those who do not have running accounts and no human collector could be more reliable.

* * *

A generation ago, the old-fashioned dog churn was used on many farms. The dog lost his employment when the development of the modern creamery rendered it more profitable to send the milk to the creamery than to make the butter on the farm. But the dog treadmill has been used for a number of other farm activities. It may be applied to the pump to supply water for the house and also for irrigation. This is being done upon a number of Kansas farms. The water used in the modern bathroom, as well as the kitchen, is pumped from the well each morning by the family dog operating a treadmill. Usually from fifteen minutes to half an hour is sufficient, and it is claimed that the exercise is good for the dog.

* * *

In Arizona a woman with a tubercular husband supports her family by doing laundry work. Her husband is unable to do any real work himself, but he has ingenious enough to devise a treadmill by which their Newfoundland dog could operate the washing machine and thus lighten the woman's work. The same dog is also being taught to deliver and collect the clothes from the homes of her customers.

* * *

Doubtless the dog's most valuable service to humanity is that of life-saving, and new instances of this are being supplied continually. A few weeks ago an old lady, reading in her bed in a Chicago tenement, fell asleep. The wind blew a curtain against the burning gas. The dog's sharp bark awoke her, but she fainted with fright at sight of the flames. The dog's barking brought assistance, but even before it arrived the brave animal had dragged his mistress from the bed and almost to the door. Though the room was filled with flame and smoke, he did not leave until she was carried out by the men who responded to his alarm.

* * *

At a summer resort last year a baby was toddling across the street, unconscious of the horse and buggy rapidly bearing down upon her. But a dog trotting along the road quickly saw the danger. He sprang forward and snatched the little one almost out from under the horse's feet, although no call had been given and no one realized her danger until it was past.

* * *

The instances of dogs rescuing children and grown people from drowning are so numerous as to attract little comment. At a number of city bathing pools a big dog is included in the party of caretakers who are on the alert to see that beginners do not get beyond their depth in the swimming pool. At sea coast resorts the big dog is frequently a great factor in securing the safety of the bathers.

* * *

A large collie dog named Joe, belonging to one of the life-saving guards at Atlantic City rendered efficient life saving service for several years by bringing in children who were carried out to deep water. Joe used to patrol the beach regularly every morning during the time when the bathers were most numerous, and he was on self-imposed duty throughout most of the day. The scream of a frightened bather would bring him quickly into the water. While all of those he rescued were not in real danger, he frequently brought in children who would have been drowned before other help could have reached them.

* * *

He established his record one Fourth of July by pulling nine persons out of deep water in one day, and he was presented with a handsome collar. Joe finally lost his life, with that of a man he was trying to save, when he was taken out upon a fishing excursion with several men in a small sailboat. A liberal quantity of liquor on board was probably responsible for the accident which capsized the boat, drowning all on board. The man's arms were clasped so tightly around the dog's neck that it was evident the animal had really been choked to death rather than drowned.

* * *

In the far north the work of the dog teams is well-known. Jack London's well known dog stories do not in any way exaggerate the faithful service and loyalty which these "huskies" render their masters. The fur traders could not live without them. Their camps are dotted over the wilderness crossed by the Mackenzie, the Slave, the Nelson and the Athabasca rivers, and the dogs are the only means of communication between them. Dr. David Wheeler tells of his dog Ellis, a big wolf hound, who could haul a toboggan loaded with 200 pounds of frozen fish. Ellis was driven one time across the long traverse of Great Slave lake during a blizzard. He traveled all day over ice, unable to see more than a few yards in any direction. He had to wind in and out because of the uneven surface, yet he never lost his course, although a blizzard had interfered, and the track of the party had been obliterated by thousands of caribou.

* * *

Some of these northern dogs can go great distances without food, because the Indian dogs, from whom they are partially descended, were kept as near starving as possible during the summer. A fur trader, named Mawson, had a dog who kept alive after the rest of the pack had succumbed to hunger. An accident sprained the ankle of the man in charge so that he could not walk. The dog brought him safely into camp on a toboggan five days after he had been given up by his comrades.

* * *

The dog is used for many purposes in Europe. In Ghent and several other cities, police dogs render valuable assistance to the officers in bringing notice of any emergency. The dogs of Belgium do work of many kinds. The sheep dogs are used most for police purposes. The cart dogs are used in cultivating the ground and also for hauling loads of poultry and vegetables into the market. There dogs really fill the place of the burro or donkey to the Belgian peasant. They are not mongrels, but a distinct breed known as the "Matin," which is closely akin to the great Dane. The value of a pure breed is so well recognized that the National Association of Dog Breeders has government authority for regulating the breeding of these animals.

* * *

The average cart dog can draw 400 pounds if necessary, although 200 pounds is considered a one-dog load. If three dogs are hitched to a 400-pound load, they can draw it for a long distance and keep up a rapid, regular trot without appearing fatigue. These cart dogs have been requisitioned in large numbers by the German military authorities and are being used to draw machine guns. Special carriages with bicycle tires are supplied for this purpose. Two dogs are hitched to a 200-pound carriage and they are able to keep up a good military speed. They travel over rough ground that would be impassable for an automobile. If the gunners who accompany them are killed, the dogs have intuition and intelligence enough to return at once from the firing line to prevent the guns from being captured by the enemy.

* * *

Thousands of dogs are used in the relief work of the different Red Cross organizations. The dogs are sent out to the firing line with first-aid outfits strapped upon their backs. In many cases this timely aid enables a wounded soldier to bind up his own wounds before medical aid reaches him, and lessens materially the loss of blood. After a battle is over the dogs act as scouts, going over the field to locate the wounded men. Often, if the field is rough and full of brush, the soldiers are completely hidden and would not be discovered but for the dogs. The French dogs accustomed to snuffle-hounding, can go into the ground and recover soldiers who have been partially buried by explosions in the trenches. One dog who rescued his master in this manner was taken back to Paris and permitted to stay by the soldier's cot in the hospital.

* * *

The courage of these dogs is fully equal to that of the soldiers. A Red Cross surgeon tells of one animal wounded in its foreleg who did not seek cover after his injury, but hobbled around for hours on three legs, carrying bandages to wounded men. It was only when he stopped for sometime beside a helpless soldier, barking loudly to attract the attention of the ambulance, that his own injury was discovered.

QUIET AND DARKNESS

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

AMELIA E. BARR (what reader of books does not love her, has not loved her, lo! these many years?) is eighty-four years old and at work on her sixty-sixth novel.

In an article in the Ladies' Home Journal she tells the methods by which she is able to write five or six hours a day at her present age.

She speaks of encouraging new thoughts, of the advantage of frequent change of occupation, of avoiding worry and anger, of simple food, of the upkeeping power of love, and of the more or less commonly preached health hints; but a striking thing she says is this:

"I am in bed between 8 and 9 in the evening. For I like to be ten hours in the quiet and darkness, though I may not sleep more than seven hours."

Quiet and darkness!

Strong, rich words, and full of meat! Among all the things you strive for and get, do you find these two things in plenty?

All forms of life need them. The plant cannot bloom continuously; it must lie its time in the earth, in quiet and darkness. Trees have their winter rest. All animals must sleep.

The human being cannot maintain efficient life unless it retreats daily into death, back to nothingness, cessation, stillness.

When we lie down at night in sleep all the visible workmen of the body set about their tasks, cleaning, repairing, restoring, adjusting, just as the cleaners go over a locomotive when it comes in from its run. These workers operate only in quiet and darkness.

It is the same with the mind. Keep constantly on the go and your thoughts get clogged, you have confusion, imperfect judgment, awkwardness. Go home, go to bed, take ten hours' quiet and darkness, and see how refreshed you will emerge.

Most of the worries and complications that beset us would vanish of themselves if we would take a long bath in quiet and darkness.

Those sudden inspirations that bring success, those brilliant meteors of thought, one of which is worth hours of plodding, love to come to us in the long stretches of quiet and darkness.

Evil, fevered, extravagant, hurtful ideas and beliefs are usually the waste and by-product of too much activity; they dissolve in quiet and darkness.

Often we petulantly say we "want to die." The expression has an element of truth in it. Why not die once a day, die into long quiet and darkness? The morning will be a veritable resurrection.

No noise, no light, no forthputting of any kind, just to lie still and let wave after wave of nothingness flow over you, as you go back to that non-being from whence you came back to the nil from which God made you—quiet and darkness.

Never mind whether you sleep or not. Just be still. It is in quiet and darkness you hear those still, small voices your life misses in its hurly-burly. It is there you find God. It is there you find even a greater stranger—yourself.

Quips and Quiddities

An amusing incident took place in one of the most splendid of the eastern hotels. A southern gentleman, formerly a member of the cabinet, was a patron of the house, and, preferring not to eat at the table d'hote, he had his meals served in his own room, with all the elegance for which the establishment is noted. Being somewhat annoyed with the airs of the servant who waited on him he desired him one day at dinner to retire. The negro bowed and took his stand directly behind the gentleman's chair. Supposing him gone, it was with some impatience that a few minutes after the gentleman saw him step forward to remove the soup.

"Fellow," said he, "leave the room; I wish to be alone."

"Excuse me, sir," said Jasper, drawing himself up stiffly, "but I am responsible for the silver"

M'Tavish and a brither Scot, M'Pherson, entered the tram and took their seats near the door. Sitting up in the corner was a young hielan' lassie, and M'Tavish was always nudging his friend.

"Hoot, man," said M'Pherson "I ken her fine."

"Hoo are ye no gaun up aside her then?" asked M'Tavish.

"Och," said McPherson, "she hasna peyed her fare yet."

Benzonia's Marvelous Mule.

BENZONIA, Mich., April 19.—Jim Kibbey swears he has the smartest mule in the southern peninsula of Michigan. The mule just has been exposed by accident after fattening for two months at the expense of Jim's absentmindedness.

Jim has about fifteen head of horses and mules this spring in his feed barn. He is known as the most absentminded fellow in the county. He forgot so often whether or not he had fed the stock that he had to put a clock in the barn and feed exactly at 6 o'clock morning and night.

In feeding he used to forget which manger he had poured the chop feed into so some of the animals got two feeds and some got none. To prevent this he carried a piece of chalk and as soon as he fed one animal he chalked up a mark so he wouldn't repeat. He noticed that Wink, the big one-eye roan mule, was getting fat fast, though nothing of it until last week.

He poured a feed of oats into Ben's manger, and chalked up a mark. A minute later the mark was gone and he got curious. Next feeding time he watched Wink. As soon as the feed was poured into the manger and Jim's back was turned Wink stuck his head over the manger and licked off the chalk mark so as to get another feed.

Jim thought that was a good joke on him and kept watching. Yesterday he discovered that Wink is in the habit of reaching up with his nose and turning the hands of the clock to 6 o'clock along about 5 and trying to hurry up feeding time by an hour.

Twenty-Fourth D. A. R. Congress Opened by President Wilson

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

WASHINGTON, April 19.—President Wilson's address here today opening the twenty-fourth annual congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution shared interest among the delegates with the contest between rival candidates for election as president general. The president's address of welcome and the annual message of the president general, Mrs. William Cummings Story, of New York, will be followed by a sharp contest over the offices, which will reach its climax in the election Wednesday.

All the offices are to be filled in the biennial election this year, but of overshadowing interest is the contest over the election of a president general. The congress this year, as was the case two years ago, apparently is divided into two factions—one supporting Mrs. Story and the other Mrs. George Thatcher Guernsey, of Kansas. Campaign managers for the rival candidates for the office were busy today lining up their forces for what promises to be one of the liveliest fights ever waged within the organization. Speculation was rife as to the outcome, although the managers for the opposing candidates, after figuring up the strength of the two camps, professed confidence in the result.

Delegates were astir early today awaiting the fall of Mrs. Story's gavel to signalize the opening of the congress. Approximately 5,000 delegates from all parts of the country were in attendance. The addresses by President Wilson and Mrs. Story featured the opening session. Other speakers included Jules Jusserand, the French ambassador; John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American union; Mrs. John Hays Hammond and Rogers Ballard Thurston, president of the Sons of the American Revolution, which organization also is meeting here.

Numerous receptions were to be held today in honor of the candidates and state officers. These included a reception by the Kansas delegation for Mrs. Guernsey and her ticket. Mrs. Story will be hostess at a reception in Continental Memorial hall tonight.

SOAP IS BAD FOR THE HAIR

Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), is cheaper and better than soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—(Advt.)

Little Stories For Bedtime

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

(Copyright, 1915, by J. G. Lloyd.)

To show one's tongue, as you well know,
Is not considered nice to do;
But if it were like Mr. Toad's
I'd want to show it—wouldn't you?

I'm quite sure you would. You see, if it were like Old Mr. Toad's it would be such a wonderful tongue that I suspect you would want everybody to see it. Old Man Toad thinks his tongue the most satisfactory tongue in the world. In fact he is quite sure that without it he couldn't get along at all, and I don't know as he could. And yet very few of his neighbors know anything about that tongue and how different it is from most other tongues. Peter Rabbit didn't until Old Mr. Toad showed him after Peter had puzzled and puzzled over the mysterious way in which bugs and flies disappeared whenever they happened to come within two inches or less of Old Man Toad.

Peter would watch them and right while he was looking at them they would vanish. Yet so far as he could see Old Mr. Toad hadn't moved. But there was no doubt that those bugs and flies had found a resting place in Old Mr. Toad's stomach. Peter was only to look at the satisfied expression on Old Mr. Toad's face to be sure of that. Then by watching Old Mr. Toad very sharply Peter discovered that Old Mr. Toad just darted his tongue out like a tiny pink flash and brought back the bug with it. What Peter couldn't understand was what Old Mr. Toad did with a tongue that would reach two inches beyond his mouth. He said as much.

"I'll show you my tongue and, then you'll wish you had one just like it," said Old Mr. Toad with a twinkle in his eyes.

He opened his big mouth and slowly ran his tongue out its full length. "Why! Whyee!" exclaimed Peter. "It's fastened at the wrong end!"

"No such thing!" replied Old Mr. Toad indignantly. "If it was fastened at the end it is how could I run it out so far?"

"But mine, like all other tongues that I have ever seen, is fastened way down in my throat," protested Peter. "Yours is fastened at the other end way in the very front of your mouth. I never heard of such a thing."

"There are a great many things you have never heard of Peter Rabbit," replied Old Mr. Toad drily. "Mine is the right way to have a tongue. Because it is fastened way up in the front of my mouth that way I can use the whole of it. You see it goes out its full length. Then when I draw it in with a big on the end of it I just turn it over so that the end that was out goes way back in my throat and takes the bug with it to just the right place to swallow."

Peter thought this over for a few minutes before he ventured another question. "I begin to understand," said he, "but how do you hold on to the bug with your tongue?"

"My tongue is sticky, of course, Mr. Stupid," replied Old Mr. Toad, looking very much disgusted, "just let me touch a bug with it and he's mine every time."

Peter thought this over. Then he felt his own tongue. "Mine isn't sticky," said he very innocently.

Old Mr. Toad laughed right out. "Perhaps if it was you couldn't ask so many questions," said he. "Now watch me catch that fly."

His funny little tongue darted out and the fly was gone. "It certainly is very handy," said Peter politely. "I think we are going to have more rain and I better be getting back to the dear Old Brier Patch. I'm very much obliged to you, Mr. Toad. I—I think you are very wonderful."

"Not at all," replied Old Mr. Toad. "I've simply got the things I need in order to live, just as you have the things you need. I couldn't get along with your kind of tongue, but no more could you get along with mine. If you live long enough you will learn that Old Mother Nature makes no mistakes. She gives is all what we need, and each one has different needs."

Pearson Hurls for Crackers Today; Poor Pitching Lost First Game to Gulls

Pearson Faces Gudger Today Against Gulls

Williams Broke Badly in Sunday's Game--Manager Smith Makes First Shift, Sending Rumler to Right--Manning Is Added to Hurling Corps

MOBILE, April 19.—Overton Pearson, former Jacksonville hurler, is the pitching choice of Manager Bill Smith for the second game of the present series with Manager Schmidt's Gulls according to announcement made by the Atlanta manager this morning. Nelderkorn will do the catching. Jim Gudger and Manager Schmidt will work for the home team.

The Crackers allowed Sunday's game to fall to the wrong side of the ledger because of poor hitting and erratic box work. Williams who opened the game worked well for two innings, then began to develop a wildness which proved fatal. His lack of control forced him into numerous holes where he had to groove one, ands the Gulls hopped on to him vigorously. He was left to take his medicine, however, until the eighth, when Manager Smith sent in Ed Manning, who up to this game had been covering right field for the team. Manning allowed no runs during his stay on the mound.

Manager Smith began the first of several shifts in the club which he had previously intimated would be made unless the bunch struck a winning stride. He sent Bill Rumler, the big catcher, to right field, bringing Manning in as reinforcement to the pitching staff. Rumler was inserted as a regular thing in the hopes that his batting would prove helpful. He smashed out one double, and on two other occasions nothing but phenomenal fielding by Miller kept him from delivering other extra base swats.

Williams' pitching became decidedly ragged in the fifth, when the Gulls scored their first run. A base on balls, and two hits filled the bases. He then presented the locals their first run when he walked another batter, forcing a man home. An infield error together with some sound hitting gave the Gulls two more in the sixth, and in the seventh, Williams went up badly, he walked one man and allowed three safe hits, netting two more scores.

The Crackers scored a shutout by scoring one in the eighth. Jenkins opened with a single, but was forced at second by Nelderkorn batting for Williams. Bowden singled, and sent Nelderkorn to third. The latter scored as Bowden was being forced at second on a roller by Williams.

After returning from the game on Sunday, Secretary N. E. Etheridge, of the Atlanta club, became ill and is under the care of a physician. Secretary Parker, of the Atlanta club last season, became ill here during the last series.

Commodores Are Here Wednesday and Saturday--Georgia Nine on Northern Trip

The Jackets have but two games on their baseball schedule for the current week. These are with Vanderbilt, and will be played on Wednesday and Saturday. According to the original schedule, the Commodores were carded to play here Friday and Saturday. However, their trip to Georgia includes two games with Mercer which were scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday. But owing to difficulty on the part of the Mercer management in getting the park on Wednesday, the Jackets agreed to switch their dates and play Wednesday instead of Friday. The Nashville collegians will play here Wednesday, go to Macon for games Thursday and Friday and return here for their last game Saturday.

While the Jackets are confining their efforts to two games, the Red and Black squad from Athens is on a tour of states to the north. Coach Bean's team onthe tilts afternoon against the North Carolina Aggies. Two games are scheduled with the Aggies, after which one will be played with Davidson at Charlotte, two with Virginia at Charlottesville, and one with the Naval academy at Annapolis.

CINCINNATI, April 19.—Timely hitting gave Cincinnati a 6 to 2 victory over St. Louis yesterday. St. Louis made two runs in the first, but after that could not score. State Leaguers Ready to Start WAYCROSS, Ga., April 19.—The opening of the Georgia State league is now only a week off. And the week is going to be the the busiest one ever known in the six cities comprising the league. None of the teams started practicing before April 12, the directors fixing the practice season at two weeks as one means of reducing expenses. Tardy arrivals have kept some of the teams from playing together for more than two or three days.

Owing to the fact that there is strong competition between Waycross and Brunswick for attendance laurels, it is doubtful if many Waycross fans will go to Brunswick for the opening next Monday. Fans here are anxious to win the attendance trophy, but realize that with a new city in the league it is going to be hard. Reports indicate that Dothan is going after the trophy to win. Brunswick regards Dothan as a stronger rival than Waycross, but there is no telling what may happen.

The first game in Brunswick will be rather unique in one respect. It will find two old time rivals fighting on the diamond with teams led by brothers. Wade Reynolds is in charge of the Brunswick bunch, and his brother, Hammond, is manager of the crew of Waycross. Each brother is as anxious to show the other up as possible, and the fans of the two cities are just as anxious for their teams to win.

Plans for making the first game in Waycross the occasion for a holiday have been formulated and will be perfected during this week. Mayor Beaton will issue a proclamation declaring the day a half holiday, and it is expected that practically every business house in the city will observe the day.

He was a free agent, having been released outright by Brooklyn, with whom he played last season. Elberfeld managed Chattanooga in 1913, but signed with New Orleans on the last day of the season in Atlanta. Elberfeld is a native of Chattanooga and a warm favorite here.

Coast Stars to Compete at Penn

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 19.—Fred Kelly, holder of the world's records in the high hurdles, and Howard Drew, who has equalled the world's best time in the 100 and 220-yard dashes, left last night for Philadelphia to compete in the Pennsylvania relay games. They will represent the University of Southern California.

The Sportlight

BY GRANTLAND RICE

AS FOR SUFFRAGE.

If their minds are made up fully,
If they're pointed for a spin,
What's the good of pushing things into a curdle?
Did they ever lose an argument
They started out to win
With only masculinity to hurdle?

If they want it—let 'em have it—
Turn it over as a gift;
Send it up as if apologies were due;
Why not be polite about it
Without straining for a lift
Since they'll grab it anyway before they're through?

The swift dash of the Giants from the old rut has cheered a number of New York fans, but, on the other paw, it has been an unseemly blow to purveyors of baseball fiction.

In all well regulated fiction stories dealing with the game there is always at least one—if not more—in the cast who displays his gilded wares before a young lady in the stands, who blushes prettily each time the hero saws on a triple or pitches a 1 1-2-hit game.

The hero, of course, is unmarried. Who ever heard of a married hero in the fiction of sport?

And then along come the Giants and rush nine middle-aged married men to the field and begin mopping up without a pause. There wasn't a bachelor in the cast at either victory. If this state of things continues much further, what is the earnest fictionist going to do about it? Something, undoubtedly, must be done unless some writer comes along with courage enough to inject gilded romance into married life.

REVISION NEEDED.

Which calls to mind the fact that Mr. Kipling's lines need revision. He handled them in this fashion:

"High hopes die on a warm hearthstone—
He travels fastest who travels alone."

The shift or substitution should adopt this naive attitude:

"Bachelor dreams are all bunk in the strife—
He hits the hardest who's hitched to a wife."

PLENTY OF COMPETITION.

From the rare dash and fight and form displayed by both Giants and Cubs at the start of the race, the April signs are already ripe that Mr. Stallings and the world series cast are in for all the competition they can carry.

The Giants hereafter should pray for a raw wind and a vast quantity of rain on their spring training trips. For the first time on record they drew spotty weather in Texas, and yet at the start they look better than in many years. It may be that a ball club can be overplayed for the first few weeks and thereby lose a bit of its natural pep.

Be that as it may, or vice versa, it is easy enough to see, after lamping their early motions, that McGraw's once three time winners are going back for the top with a rush and smash entirely unexpected by those who watched them break and falter last August and September.

FREAK SIGNS.

The additional signs are already proclaiming the advent of a freak year.

On opening day Mr. Pennock, of the Mackmen, went to the last man up in the ninth inning before yielding a scratch hit, trimmed with all the elements of fluke.

On the same day Larry Doyle pumped out five safe blows. The next day Rube Marquard in his first game gives vent to a no-hit affair, adding another sprig to a career already rampant with laurel. The tail and stately Rube is certainly no piker. No other man in pitching history has inhabited more spaces beneath the spotlight. The only accomplishment he hasn't achieved so far is pitching a shutout with his toes.

SAD MISTAKE.

Evidently Philadelphia last fall made a clerical error in battling for the world series crown. She sent the wrong ball club to tackle the Braves. Dispersing the Mackmen and upsetting Grover Cleveland Alexander are no part of one and the same, according to late Boston advices.

"Willard's career," writes a contemporary, "is stranger than any fiction writer would dare to put in print." Sport, for that matter, is chuck full of stuff that no fiction writer could handle without being labelled a faker or a romancer of the rawest type. Suppose some fiction writer had turned in a yarn of a ball club jammed into the cellar in July—only to suddenly break loose and win a world championship three months later on? No editor would have accepted it, and if any one had the readers would have perused the wild outburst with mocking laughter and derisive shouts.

RAILING The News BY INNIS BROWN

Some close follower of the game has observed that you can count nothing certain in baseball, meaning that, when you think you have the dope all clinched and matters figured to a certain finish, you are a little more than likely to be following the off trail. Manager Bill Smith just now concurs fully in the opinion expressed by said student of the game.

The immediate cause for his support of this theory is the work which he has been forced to watch his hurling staff dish up in the games played since the regular Southern league season opened up. With the single exception of the opening game at Mobile, the Crackers have been forced to work behind a badly bedraggled, not to say mildewed, brand of flinging. In each game some good pitching has been done, but it has been very spotted, and somewhere along the route each time, enough of the soggy lumpy brand has been cast in to smear up the whole and kick away the game.

This is all the more puzzling to Manager Bill, because of the fact that before the regular season opened, and while the bunch was battling the visiting forces composed of majors, minors, and independents in exhibition games, the flinging looked first-class from every angle. In only one or two of the entire list of exhibition games did the opposing force do any heavy damage to local flinging. The Phillies pounded Ed Dent in the game played with them but this was nothing to create undue alarm, for this outfit is liable to hammer any of them. Outside of this one game, the home pitchers made very creditable showings in every game played.

Especially did they look to have one very essential factor in good pitching—control. Now they are almost without exception showing total lack of being able to get 'em over when they have to. Bases on balls have proven the undoing of the entire crew. Not only has wildness resulted in frequent free passes to first, but it has furthermore kept the flingers in the hole, where they frequently find the count three and one or three and two with the necessity of calling one up as straight as a string with nothing on it but the cover. It is easy enough to imagine what the opposition is doing and will continue to do with such hurling.

Meanwhile Manager Smith is daily adding to the collection of "crow's feet" about his optics, to say nothing of extra strands of gray that are streaking his thatch. He still believes that the bunch carries the stuff, if the boys can ever get going and deliver. He expects to give them a little further opportunity to get straightened out, and will hardly make any changes within the next week or so. But unless they begin to deliver within a period of a couple of weeks, the quest for hitters, is going to be further developed into one for flingers as well.

COTTON MADE NEW HIGH RECORD FOR THE SEASON

Improved Spot Demand, Covering and Continued Bull Support Caused Rise

By Associated Press.]

NEW YORK, April 19.—Relatively easy cables and reports of beneficial rains in the southwest implied considerable realizing in the cotton market early today and the opening was a shade to 3 points lower. Offerings were easily absorbed at this decline, however, and prices held fairly steady with scattered buying encouraged by the strength of the stock market and reports of continued activity in the market for cotton goods. A cheap export journal by a local statistical bureau today pointed to a decrease of 18.6 per cent in the acreage, compared with indications of a little more than a decrease at about the same time last year.

The market showed increasing activity and strength after the morning, with prices reaching high records on all deliveries on renewed buying by Liverpool, for spot and on covering and continued bull support. The market continued to advance up to 11c, with the spot interest selling about 30 points higher shortly after midday.

The early afternoon advance carried prices about 9 to 16 points net higher, after which realizing caused somewhat slight recessions.

OLD GUARD OFFICERS TO BE RECEPTION GUESTS

Full Dress Uniforms Will Be in Vogue at Ansley Thursday Evening

Newly elected officers of the Old Guard Battalion will be guests of honor at a reception and dance to be given at the Hotel Ansley Thursday evening. During the evening buffet supper will be served.

The command will appear in their handsome full dress uniforms. Colonel J. F. Burke, for many years commandant and now honorary colonel of the battalion, Captain Percy Quarterman, chairman, and the following officers and their ladies will act as the reception committee: Major Edwin L. Wight, major commanding; Captain John W. Murrell, adjutant; Captain A. McD. Wilson, commissary; Captain Robert A. Brownlee, quartermaster; Captain George M. Hope, Captain Harrison Jones, Lieutenant T. A. Kemp, Lieutenant Charles Hopkins, Lieutenant Frank Ridge, Lieutenant E. L. Bergstrom; honorary staff and their aides.

THEATERS

Harry Houdini, the world's most marvelous mystic, comes to the Forsyth theater this week in a presentation of such startling and astounding performance of his strenuous career, liberating himself after being locked in a water torture cell (his own invention) while standing on his head, his ankles clamped and locked in the center of the massive cover. On the same bill with him is a constellation of Keith stars.

Theda Bara, "the vampire woman," formerly the beautiful and brilliant leading woman of the Playhouse of Thrills in Paris, has never been seen to better advantage than in the Fox picture play, The Clemenceau Case."

The character of Iza, the woman of splendid beauty, whose obsession is luring men to love and to death, affords her rare opportunity to render a character that will scorch the memory of spectators. Miss Bara's appearance at the Grand will be the masterful picturization of "Captain Courtesy" by the Bosworth players, with Dustin Farnum in the title role.

COTTON GOSSIP

John W. Grant Takes $14,000 Permit for Hotel Alterations on Building at 6, 8 and 10 South Broad Street--No Sales Announcement Monday but Agents Report There Will Be Some During the Present Week

John W. Grant has taken a building permit for $14,000 for the alterations he will make on his property at Nos. 6, 8 and 10 South Broad street.

As already announced, the present building will be remodelled into a hotel, and has been leased to E. Basil, who already operates Child's hotel adjoining this property. Mr. Basil will operate the two hotels.

Building permits Monday morning were light, none of consequence having been issued.

There were also no sales announcements Monday morning, although agents reported they had some in hand which should be ready for announcement during the week.

The improvement in general business conditions, which is heard of on every side, continues to inspire confidence in real estate, and agents look forward to a steadily improving market.

HEAD OF "REUTER'S" KILLS HIMSELF WITH PISTOL

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, April 19.—Baron Herbert de Reuter, managing director of Reuter's Telegram company, was found dead yesterday at his home near Reigate, Surrey. A discharged revolver lay near his body, and the authorities declare there is little doubt he committed suicide.

Baron de Reuter was prostrated by the death of his wife last Thursday. Her body is still in the home awaiting interment. Their only son is in the army.

DEPUTY SHERIFF HODGES OF VALDOSTA IS WOUNDED

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

VALDOSTA, Ga., April 19.—This morning about 2 o'clock Policeman Dampier and Deputy Sheriff Hodges went to the home of Richard McRae, a negro, to serve a warrant for wife beating. Hodges entered the front of the house and the negro, pretending to be going after his clothes, stepped out of the rear door, where Dampier grabbed him and a scuffle ensued. Dampier's pistol dropped on the ground and the negro grabbed it, shooting at Hodges, the bullet passing through the deputy's elbow. Hodges returned the fire, sending a bullet through the negro's body and causing a serious wound, though the negro is still alive.

A multi-millionaire was recently asked to tell, what he considered the greatest factor that contributed to his success. Here is what he replied:

"I would repeat as nearly as I can remember the words my mother spoke to me as she bade me good-by when I was leaving home to take my cold plunge into the world. Her parting advice was: 'If you are able to save any money, put it into land, which God made and which the schemers cannot take away from you.' I never forgot her advice and I consider the most profitable of my investments to be those in land or having their security based upon land."
